Sayyid Al-Hakeem meets with scholarship students and emphasizes the importance of studying rare and high-demand specializations.

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers' Alliance, met with several Iraqi students studying at various universities around the world in various specializations, and congratulated them on the trust their country has shown by selecting them amongst thousands of candidates to pursue their education with the support of the Iraqi state. His Eminence stressed the importance of increasing the number of scholarship students and making this program a priority for the current and future governments. H.E. also stressed the significance of focusing on high-demand and impactful fields of study, particularly in artificial intelligence and modern technologies.

Moreover, H.E. highlighted the need for students to strive for excellence and skill development to reach their goals. H.E. also called for empowering these scholarship students and leveraging their academic experiences and the high quality of education they receive.
