Sayyid Al-Hakeem: All Hopes on Internal Unity, Services Provision

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers Alliance, met with a group of sheikhs and dignitaries from the esteemed Al-Zarari tribe, led by Sheikh Yusuf Al-Zarari. H.E. reflected on the shared history between the people of Iraq, highlighting how their relationship was strengthened by heroic stances in the face of dictatorship and the subsequent efforts to build the Iraqi state, during which all segments of the Iraqi population made immense sacrifices.

Sayyid Al-Hakeem noted that Iraq is gradually emerging from a difficult phase, as evidenced by the current stability in the political, social, and security sectors. H.E. emphasized that hopes are pinned on uniting the internal front, strengthening the Iraqi position, and providing adequate services to the people.

H.E. praised the broad participation in the regional elections, highlighting the healthy competition among political forces and the transparency that characterized the process, reflecting the will of the Kurdish Street. H.E. congratulated the achievement, which he believed would drive the region toward further stability, positively impacting the overall stability of the country. H.E. stressed that Iraq's stability depends on the stability of all its regions, as they are interlinked, like a single body, complementing each other.

Sayyid Al-Hakeem also noted that mutual visits help bring perspectives closer together and expressed his wishes for continued success and prosperity for the Kurdistan Region, both government and people.
