During a press conference following his meeting with the local government of Nineveh, Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers Alliance, expressed his great joy in visiting the province and engaging with its leadership. His Eminence highlighted Mosul’s status as a “miniature Iraq” due to its rich cultural and ethnic diversity. H.E. also noted the significant advancements in reconstruction and development, alongside the province’s improved security and social cohesion.

Sayyid Al-Hakeem commended the people of Nineveh for their forward-looking vision, emphasizing that achieving this vision requires collective efforts to complete the rebuilding process. On security matters, Sayyid Al-Hakeem recalled the historic fatwa of Grand Ayatollah Sayyid Al-Sistani (may his shadow endure) and its pivotal role in liberating the land, emphasizing the spirit of national solidarity that emerged in Iraq’s defense. H.E. called for granting local governments the constitutional powers necessary to fulfill their responsibilities while reinforcing internal unity and maintaining high security readiness under the principle of “neither underestimation nor exaggeration.”
