Al-Hakeem Meets Political Analysts, Strategic Research Directors

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, head of the National State Powers Alliance, held a meeting with a group of political analysts and directors of strategic research centers, led by Dr. Mohammed Sadiq Al-Hashemi. The discussion centered on the critical role of research institutions in supporting the Iraqi state and actively contributing to resolving the country's pressing issues. His Eminence emphasized the importance of maintaining continuous communication with local governments and governmental institutions and taking the initiative to highlight the positive impact these centers have on decision-making processes.

H.E. noted that Iraq has overcome many of the challenges it faced in the past and is now experiencing security, social, and political stability. H.E. praised the significant role played by the State Administration Coalition in bridging perspectives and supporting the government in its service-oriented and developmental efforts.

Regarding external challenges, H.E. called for unified positions and a cohesive media discourse to address these issues. H.E. underscored Iraq’s vital role in regional affairs, given its size and historical significance, and stressed the need for sustained engagement with the Arab and Islamic worlds.

H.E. also highlighted the importance of preemptive operations to eliminate the remnants of terrorism, noting that the loss of its social support base is a pivotal factor in weakening terrorism. Furthermore, H.E. called for diversifying national income sources and revitalizing productive sectors such as agriculture, industry, tourism, and investment, alongside prioritizing modern technology to drive progress.
