Sayyid Al-Hakeem Meets Ayatollah Sheikh Hassan Ramadhani, Stresses Cooperation Among Religious Institutions to Address Current Challenges

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers' Alliance, met with Ayatollah Sheikh Hassan Ramadhani, Secretary-General of the Ahl Al-Bayt (peace be upon them) World Assembly. The meeting addressed a number of key issues facing the Islamic nation in general, and the followers of Ahl Al-Bayt (peace be upon them) in particular.

The discussion centered on the challenges currently confronting the Muslim world—especially in the fields of Islamic outreach and cultural engagement. Both sides emphasized the vital role of religious institutions in tackling these issues and the need to develop a comprehensive vision that considers contemporary priorities and the pressing problems faced by Islamic societies.

The importance of raising public awareness—particularly among youth—was also highlighted, in order to counter foreign ideologies that threaten Islamic identity. His Eminence stressed the necessity of high-level coordination among Islamic institutions to form a unified and effective approach to the intellectual and cultural challenges facing the region.

Both parties affirmed the importance of collective action and collaboration among religious institutions to unify efforts and reinforce Islamic identity across all aspects of life.
