Sayyid Al-Hakeem To Enki Center: To Research Aligned with National Priorities, Informed Participation in Upcoming Elections

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers Alliance, met this evening with a group of researchers from the Enki Center for Studies and Research. His Eminence commended their scholarly efforts aimed at developing practical solutions to Iraq’s pressing challenges, stressing the need for research to align with national priorities and yield actionable outcomes that directly inform decision-makers.

H.E. highlighted the importance of thoroughly analyzing the findings of the recent national census, noting that the data it provides holds valuable insights for shaping public policy and identifying developmental needs. H.E. called for greater synergy among research institutions and broader cooperation to serve the public good and enhance national performance.

H.E. also underscored the need to highlight achievements made amid the current state of political and security stability, emphasizing that this stability offers a timely opportunity to advance reform efforts and strengthen institutional foundations.

Regarding upcoming national milestones, H.E. reiterated the importance of the forthcoming elections, urging broad, informed, and effective participation. H.E. affirmed that such engagement plays a pivotal role in reinforcing stability, deepening democratic practice, and shaping the future of Iraq’s political landscape.
