Sayyid Al-Hakeem: Iraq Has Overcome Security, Sectarian, Political Challenges, Forward Toward Strong Economy, Service-Building

During his visit to the guesthouse of Sheikh Khalid Al-Khafaji, head of the Khafaja Tribe in Babylon Governorate, Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers Alliance, recalled on the evening of Saturday, October 25, 2025, a long journey marked by sacrifice for Iraq and the faith—a journey that, by Allah's grace, culminated in the fall of dictatorship and the foundation of a new Iraq. His Eminence affirmed that Iraq is now on the right path and that remarkable progress has been achieved.

H.E. stated, "Iraq has successfully overcome multiple challenges, including sectarian strife, security threats, and political conflict." H.E. further explained that the new phase of focus is economic and service-oriented, centered on resolving people's problems and addressing unemployment. H.E. pointed out the growing interest of major international companies in Iraq, describing it as a clear indicator of the country's stability and the promise of a prosperous future.

H.E. expressed confidence that Iraq will succeed in meeting the service challenge and achieving public satisfaction, just as it did in overcoming past crises. H.E. called for advancing the nation through wise choices in the upcoming elections, emphasizing the importance of empowering capable representatives who can shoulder the responsibilities of the next stage, while maintaining close connection and service to their constituents.
